Air marshal shoots, kills man claiming to have bomb at Miami airport

Passengers exit an American Airlines plane with hands above their heads at Miami International Airport on Wednesday. A passenger who claimed to have a bomb was shot and killed by a federal air marshal.

MIAMI | An agitated passenger who claimed to have a bomb in his backpack was shot and killed by a federal air marshal Wednesday after he bolted frantically from a jetliner that was about to take off, officials said. No bomb was found.

The man, identified as Rigoberto Alpizar, a 44-year-old U.S. citizen, was gunned down on a jetway just before the American Airlines plane was about to leave for Orlando, Fla., near his home in Maitland. It was the first time since the Sept. 11 attacks that an air marshal had shot at anyone, Homeland Security Department spokesman Brian Doyle said.

Alpizar

According to a witness, the man frantically ran down the aisle of the Boeing 757, flailing his arms, while his wife tried to explain that he was mentally ill and had not taken his medication.

The passenger indicated there was a bomb in his bag and was confronted by air marshals but ran off the aircraft, Doyle said. The marshals went after him and ordered him to get down on the ground, but he did not comply and was shot when he apparently reached into the bag, Doyle said.

The plane was carrying 119 other passengers and crew. Alpizar had arrived in Miami earlier in the day from Ecuador, authorities said.

No bomb was found, said James E. Bauer, agent in charge of the Federal Air Marshals field office in Miami. He said there was no reason to believe there was any connection to terrorists. JOHN PAIN (AP)

RING BONES

Rovering Charges

Dog-lovers will soon be able to talk to their pet whenever they want, thanks to to PetCell, the first cell phones for dogs. The device is a bone-shaped cell phone that hangs off a dog's collar and functions as a two-way speaker, so users can either talk to the pet or listen to hear what it is doing, the Edmonton Journal reported. It also has a GPS device inside so owners can track their dog. And, if someone finds a lost dog with the device, they can push a button to speak with the owner. PetCell devices, which sell for $350 to $400, work on standard cellular networks and have their own number. It answers automatically when owners dial the number. (EXPRESS)

A Long, Narrow Strip ... Joint

A judge has granted an exemption to a Nashville strip club from a law stopping patrons from being within three feet of dancers. The customers can't help it — the building is too thin, the Nashville Tennessean reported. The judge issued a temporary restraining order against the city, which was trying to shut the club down. "The building is so narrow where the stage is located, you can't have everybody three feet away," said George Barrett, a lawyer for the Brass Stables club. The club said it can't expand to fit the requirement, because it shares a common wall with buildings on each side. (EXPRESS)

ICE

On the Rocks

The ice-bar craze came to Sydney, Australia, on Tuesday, as the Minus Five Ice Bar opened to the public. The bar is kept at a constant temperature of 23 degrees Fahrenheit and is decorated with ice sculptures made from glacial ice from Canada. Unfortunately, however, bargoers can't make a full evening out of it: There is a limit of three drinks per person, because of the effect alcohol has at such low temperatures — which is not unlike the risks of drinking at high altitudes. Just Hope the Rats Don't Turn Against Us

A rat brain in a Petri dish has learned how to fly an F-22 jet simulator, as part of a scientific effort to combine computers with biological components, the Telegraph reported. The research at the University of Florida is meant to explore ways of developing living computers to operate unmanned aircraft in missions where it is too dangerous for humans. The 25,000 cells are spread across a grid of 60 electrodes and linked to a desktop computer, then trained to use the simulator and control the plane's flight path. (EXPRESS)

Bush Cites Economic Progress in Iraq

President admits to reconstruction difficulties

WASHINGTON | Defending his war policy, President Bush said Wednesday that Iraq is making quiet, steady progress in repairing its shattered economy though reconstruction "has not always gone as well as we had hoped" because of unrelenting violence.

"Rebuilding a nation devastated by a dictator is a large undertaking," the president said. "It's even harder when terrorists are trying to blow up that which the Iraqis are trying to build."

Bush spoke before the Council on Foreign Relations in the second of four addresses to answer criticism about America's presence in Iraq, where the U.S. death toll has eclipsed 2,100. Bush is laboring under the lowest job approval rating of his presidency, and the speeches are part of a public relations campaign in the run-up to the Dec. 15 vote in Iraq to create a democratically elected government that will run the country.

While not admitting errors, Bush spoke about how the U.S. "adjusted our approach" in helping rebuild Iraqi cities. In his speech on Iraq last week, Bush talked about early miscalculations that were made in training Iraqi forces. A majority of Americans now say the war was a mistake, and critics of the administration's reconstruction strategy say not enough has been done in the nearly three years since the invasion to reduce unemployment, step up oil production and keep the lights on.

"The Iraqi people want jobs, security and basic services, and the president's words will continue to ring hollow until these urgent needs are met," Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said. "Nearly half of the funds appropriated by Congress remain unspent and millions of dollars have been lost to corruption."

No Escaping Student Loans

Government can go after Social Security checks, high court rules

WASHINGTON | America's seniors and disabled cannot escape debts from old student loans, the Supreme Court ruled Wednesday, freeing the government to pursue Social Security benefits as part of an effort to collect billions in delinquent loans.

The Bush administration had argued that the ability to withhold Social Security benefits is an important tool in the pursuit of $5.7 billion in student loan debt that is over 10 years old. Overall, outstanding loans total about $33 billion.

The unanimous decision went against a disabled 67-year-old Seattle man who lives in public housing and had sued claiming he needed all of his $874 monthly check to pay for food and medicine.

James Lockhart's benefits had been cut by 15 percent to cover debts he incurred in the 1980s. He has about $77,000 in unpaid loans.

The court's decision applies to loans that date back more than 10 years, and covers both disability and retirement benefits under the Social Security program.

The ruling, written by Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, will probably be one of her last. She is retiring after 24 years.

In a concurring opinion, Justice Antonin Scalia said Congress "...flatly contracted and thereby effectively repealed part of the Social Security Act."

Senior advocacy groups called the benefits "critical in preserving a measure of financial independence for older and disabled workers."

Delay Seeks Fast Trial on One Charge

AUSTIN, TEXAS | Rep. Tom DeLay asked a judge Wednesday to separate the two remaining charges against him and let him to go to trial quickly on one count.

The Texas Republican is seeking a quick resolution of the charges so he can regain his post as House majority leader when Congress reconvenes in late January. House GOP rules prevent him from serving in the post as long as he remains under indictment.

On Monday, Texas Judge Pat Priest dismissed one conspiracy charge against DeLay but let stand charges of money laundering and conspiracy to launder money. Because Priest stripped some language in the remaining conspiracy charge, that count could be tied up in the courts if prosecutors appeal. DeGuerin asked that a trial be tentatively scheduled for the first or second week in January.

Rove still focus of CIA leak probe after Woodward deposition

WASHINGTON | Special counsel Patrick Fitzgerald was back before a federal grand jury on Wednesday in the CIA leak case, with deputy White House chief of staff Karl Rove still under investigation.

Since the Oct. 28 indictment of Vice President Dick Cheney's chief of staff, I. Lewis "Scooter" Libby, two more reporters have been pulled into the investigation — The Washington Post's Bob Woodward and Time magazine's Viveca Novak.

Woodward has given a deposition about a conversation he had in mid-June 2003 in which a senior Bush administration official disclosed the CIA status of undercover officer Valerie Plame. Fitzgerald is seeking Novak's testimony about her conversations with Rove's lawyer, Robert Luskin, in 2004.

Fitzgerald did not comment on Wednesday's nearly three-hour grand jury session where the prosecutor was accompanied by deputies and an FBI agent. PETE YOST (AP)

Rice Seeks to Clarify Torture Policy

Interrogation rules said to apply to U.S. personnel in any locale

KIEV, UKRAINE | Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice sought Wednesday to clarify U.S. policy on harsh interrogation methods, saying no U.S. personnel may use cruel or degrading practices at home or abroad.

"As a matter of U.S. policy," Rice said during a press conference with Ukrainian President Viktor Yushchenko, the United Nations Convention Against Torture "extends to U.S. personnel wherever they are, whether they are in the U.S. or outside the U.S."

Rice did not, however, give examples of banned practices, define the meaning of cruelty or degradation and did not say if the rules would apply to private contractors or foreign interrogators.

Rice's remarks follow debate in the U.S. over the government policies for holding and questioning detainees, including Bush administration statements that a ban on cruel, inhumane and degrading treatment did not apply to detainees held overseas. In practice, that could mean CIA employees could use methods in overseas prisons that would not be allowed in the U.S.

Rice's remarks came amid

strong and sustained criticism among European allies and others around the world over techniques such as "waterboarding," in which prisoners are strapped to a plank and dunked in water, made to fear they may be drowned.

At every stop on her European tour this week, Rice has faced questions about U.S. practices in the pursuit of terrorists, including whether the CIA has run secret prisons on European soil or mistreated prisoners during clandestine flights.

The European Union and several European countries have requested an explanation, and the continent's top human rights organization is investigating. ANNE GEARAN (AP)

The chair for former Iraqi President Saddam Hussein sits empty Wednesday after he didn't show for a court session. A judge adjourned the hearings until Dec. 21.

Saddam Boycotts Trial

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | Saddam Hussein followed through Wednesday on his threat to boycott his trial, and the court adjourned until after next week's national elections. Gunmen, meanwhile, kidnapped the 8-year-old son of a bodyguard for a judge in the case.

Inside the courtroom, one of Saddam's co-defendants lashed out at conditions of his own detention, saying guards offered only "the worst brands" of cigarettes.

Barazan Ibrahim's outburst came a day after Saddam, his half brother, warned that he would not return to the "unjust" court to protest the conditions of his detention.

The court convened Wednesday after four hours of behind-the-scenes consultations failed to resolve the standoff. After hearing from two more witnesses, Chief Judge Rizgar Mohammed Amin adjourned the hearings until Dec. 21 — six days after the parliamentary elections, which officials fear may coincide with a spike in insurgent violence.

Court official Raid Juhi insisted that Saddam did not boycott the hearing but that the court "decided he should be removed" after the closed-door consultations. (AP)

Official Involved In China's Toxic Spill Found Dead

JIAMUSI, CHINA | A deputy mayor who claimed there was no pollution from a chemical plant explosion was found dead at his home amid public anger over officials' failure to quickly alert residents that tons of toxins had spilled into a major river.

Wang Wei, the 43-year-old deputy mayor of Jilin, the city in northeast China where the blast occurred, was found dead Tuesday, the Hong Kong media outlets reported. They said the cause of death was unknown.

The government tried to mollify the public Wednesday by promising a thorough inquiry into the spill into the Songhua River. But the government didn't say whether it would target the biggest focus of public anger — accusations that Communist Party officials tried to cover up the pollution. (AP)

8 Die in Egypt Poll Clashes

Police block supporters of banned group from voting in some towns

ZAGAZIG, EGYPT | Police barricaded polling stations and fired tear gas and rubber bullets Wednesday to keep supporters of the banned Muslim Brotherhood from voting in the final day of parliamentary elections. At least eight people were killed, including a 14-year-old boy.

Supporters of the banned Brotherhood fought back, hurling stones and molotov cocktails and cornering security forces in some towns.

The last day of the vote, which stretched over a month, was by far the most violent. A total of at least 10 people have been killed during the three rounds of balloting, which began Nov. 9 and are considered a key test of President Hosni Mubarak's pledge to open the autocratic political system.

Voters gather in front of a polling station in Egypt after they were denied entry.

Hundreds have been wounded and more than 1,000 arrested, mainly supporters of the fundamentalist Brotherhood, which has fielded candidates as independents.

The Brotherhood calls for implementing Islamic law but has long been vague about what that means. It campaigns for head scarves for women and against immodest dress, but it insists it stands for a more moderate version of Islam than in Saudi Arabia.

Among the deaths, 14-year-old Mohammed Karam el-Taher was killed when police fired at demonstrators in Qattawiya, a Nile Delta village in el-Sharqiya province not far from Zagazig.

The Interior Ministry confirmed the deaths, but accused the Brotherhood of instigating riots.

Ministry spokesman Ibrahim Hammad accused Brotherhood "thugs" of causing the disturbances. "The police are protecting the judges (who supervise polling stations) and helping the voters to reach the ballot box," Hammad said in a statement. NADIA ABOU EL-MAGD (AP)

Real Estate May Rebound in '06

While housing prices are up over last year, sales have slowed

WASHINGTON | Home sellers, buyers and Realtors in the Washington area were hoping the market would rebound in the fall, but after a slow November, they're now predicting a spring turnaround. Housing prices are up over last November in both Montgomery County and in D.C. — but homes are not selling as fast as they did last year.

The Greater Capital Area Association of Realtors reports listings for single family homes in Montgomery County are up almost 75 percent over this time last year. Many more condos are available in the District, with listings up 114 percent over last year.

Despite all the options, buyers are not signing, with the number of contracts down 18 percent in both jurisdictions. Average prices in both places are up by about $100,000 to $560,327 in Montgomery and $618,692 in the District.

Susann Haskins, the president of GCAAR, attributes the numbers to a seasonal slowdown and a rebalancing of the market. Some sellers, she said, were waiting to put their homes on the market when it peaked and are now trying to sell before it tanks. "I don't see this as the bubble bursting or doomsday, but a reflection of a more normal market than we have had in years," Haskins said.

DON'T LEAVE YOUR CAR: Prince George's County police say they're watching driveways and area parking lots for cars left running while drivers are inside homes and businesses. Police say about 30 percent of cars stolen in the county are taken while the keys are in the ignition. Police will pass out $60 fines to drivers who leave running cars unattended. (AP)

Warner Plans $255M for Va. Colleges

RICHMOND, VA. | Gov. Mark R. Warner said Wednesday he plans to include $255 million in his proposed state budget for research and development projects at colleges and universities in Virginia, which lags behind neighboring states in such spending.

Several state universities are committing up to $299 million, Warner said. It would come from budget surpluses that topped $500 million for the fiscal year that ended last year and are expected to reach or exceed $1 billion for the current budget year. ZINIE CHEN SAMPSON (AP)

Lucky Few To Visit Panda Cub

Today's the day D.C. has been waiting for: Tai Shan's debut

WASHINGTON | Nearly five months after the birth of a giant panda cub at the National Zoo made headlines around the world, Tai Shan is expected to go on limited display Thursday. The 22-pound black and white cub could be seen by as many as 600 people each day through Dec. 31. From 11 a.m. until 1 p.m., groups of people who reserved free tickets through the zoo's Web site will be allowed to peer through the glass of Tai Shan's climate-controlled exhibit area and observe the cub teething on bamboo, climbing over rocks and mimicking play activity learned from his mother. Town to Be Dark For Christmas

LONA CONING, MD. | It's hard to say who the Scrooge is, but there will be no Christmas lights hung from utility poles along Main Street in Lonaconing this season.

The Town Council voted Monday to cancel the decorations for the first time in nearly 70 years after dealing for months with utilities whose inspectors found that the tradition would pose a threat to public safety.

Mayor John Coburn said there was little chance of resolving the issue in time to hang the decorations, which usually go up in mid-November. "It'll be dark here at Christmas," Coburn said. (AP)

Ford Considering A Vast Overhaul

Automaker may have to shut down several plants to trim costs

DETROIT | Ford Motor Co.'s board of directors began a two-day meeting Wednesday to consider a sweeping restructuring plan the company hopes will help pull it out of a slump. Thousands of jobs are on the line and several plants may shut down to help the nation's No. 2 automaker overcome rising costs and the loss of market share to foreign rivals.

Ford has at least eight assembly plants at significant risk of closure for many reasons, including the products they make, their age, their proximity to suppliers and the flexibility they have to produce a variety of products, according to auto analysts. The plants employ more than 17,000 hourly and salaried workers.

The automaker is expected to reveal the plan on Jan. 23, according to United Auto Workers Vice President Gerald Bantom, who is in charge of negotiations with Ford. Bantom said he had no details of the plan, but industry analysts say Ford must take major steps to get its plant capacity in line with falling U.S. demand for its vehicles.

At the top of the list for closure may be the St. Louis plant in Missouri, which makes the struggling Ford Explorer and the Mercury Mountaineer. DEE-ANN DURBIN (AP)

FACT: The levels of hazardous pollutants in indoor air has been found to be up to 70 times greater than in outdoor air. (EPA)

FACT: 50% of all illnesses are caused by polluted indoor air. (American College of Allergists)

FACT: One out of six people who suffer from allergies do so because of the direct relationship to fungi and bacteria in air duct systems. (Total Health Magazine)

Dust, dirt, pollen, animal dander and other air-borne contaminants are pulled into your duct system every time the furnace or air conditioner runs.

These contaminants build up inside the ductwork over time and can help make your duct system a breeding ground for mold spores, bacteria, fungus, mildew and other microbes.

Each time the furnace or air conditioner is turned on, contaminants are spewed out and circulated throughout your home and affect the health and comfort of your family.

Family members who suffer from allergies, asthma or other respiratory ailments as well as children and the elderly are especially vulnerable to the effects of indoor air pollutants.

The removal of contaminants from the entire HVAC system is recognized by industry experts as the most effective way to eliminate air duct pollutants. This is referred to as the "source removal" method of duct cleaning.

In addition to the obvious health benefits, ducts cleaning can help you maintain a cleaner home. It also helps to restore HVAC system capacity and lessen running time, resulting in lower heating and cooling bills.

The HEPA-AIRE method used by our company assures you that your ducts are being cleaned with the most advanced source removal equipment available.

Marlins Cap Off Fire Sale By Trading Pierre to Cubs

The Florida Marlins likely finished their salary purge on Wednesday, sending center fielder Juan Pierre to the Chicago Cubs for right-hander Sergio Mitre and Double-A pitchers Ricky Nolasco and Renyel Pinto. The only high-priced players remaining on the Marlins roster are 22-game winner Dontrelle Willis and slugger Miguel Cabrera, who are eligible for salary arbitration for the first time but are not expected to be traded. COLLEGE FOOTBALL

3 Finalists for the Heisman

The Heisman Trophy is a three-man race — just as it's been all season. Reggie Bush and Matt Leinart of Southern California will be back in New York on Saturday, along with Texas quarterback Vince Young, when the Heisman Trophy is awarded. On Wednesday, the Downtown Athletic Club, which hands out college football's most prestigious individual award, invited only those three players to the presentation ceremony. (AP)

ON THE MARK: Redskins quarterback Mark Brunell has learned a few things in his long NFL career, like how to avoid throwing interceptions. He has only five this season.

Brunell Is Playing It Safe

Redskins QB has the lowest interception rate in the NFL this year

REDSKINS | Mark Brunell is No. 1 in the NFL.

"In fumbles?" he asked. "Age?"

Nope. Only five of his 370 passes have been intercepted, a miserly 1.4 percent pickoff rate.

For all the talk about the Washington Redskins' turnover problems — they're minus-10 in turnover differential — Brunell hasn't had a wayward spurt to contribute to it. He's on his second three-game streak without an interception, having kept his passes away from the opponents since Nov. 13 at Tampa Bay.

Much of it is due to veteran smarts. Brunell knows when to drift out of the pocket and throw the ball away instead of trying to force it into a crowd. It doesn't look pretty, it doesn't look brave, and the fans groan when it happens, but he often considers it his best option.

"I don't like throwing it away," he said. "I don't like it at all. I'd rather hit a guy, but many times guys are covered. So many times the best thing to do is put it in the third row."

Brunell's bigger problem has been the fumbles. He has nine, and six have been recovered by the other team.

As for his league-lead in interception percentage, Brunell might lose it this week even if he doesn't throw one Sunday against the Arizona Cardinals. Minnesota's Brad Johnson has thrown only two picks in 163 attempts, but he doesn't quite have the 14 attempts-per-game necessary to qualify for the official weekly list of league leaders.

"Having played this many games, we've backed off on the interceptions this year," Brunell said. "You learn from something good, but you learn a lot more from the mistakes that you make." JOSEPH WHITE (AP)

Astros Cut Ties With 'The Rocket'

BASEBALL | The Houston Astros declined to offer salary arbitration to Roger Clemens on Wednesday, a move that means he can't re-sign with the National League champions until May 1.

The seven-time Cy Young Award winner spent the last two seasons with his hometown team and hasn't decided whether to pitch next year or retire. At 43, he led the major leagues in ERA at 1.87, going 13-8 to help the Astros reach the World

He made $18 million, and the Astros didn't want to risk going to salary arbitration while they awaited his decision whether to play. (AP)

Congress Debates BCS

WASHINGTON | A playoff system could be used in major college football, the head of the Bowl Championship Series told Congress on Wednesday.

When House Subcommittee on Commerce Trade and Consumer Protection Chairman Cliff Stearns, R-Fla., pointed out that lower divisions have playoffs for football, BCS coordinator Kevin Weiberg said: "It certainly, congressman, is possible to have a playoff at the Division I-A level, as well. We have chosen not to go down that path."

Between jokes about needing tickets for bowl games and remarks about more important matters they could be addressing, lawmakers on the subcommittee — which examined steroids in pro sports earlier this year — said they are not interested in pursuing legislation. But they did want to know why Division I-A football is the only college sport without a playoff system. "Why can't it do it? Why can't it do it?" asked Rep. Joe Barton, R-Texas. (AP)

Hoyas Face a Roadblock

Georgetown gets put to the test with game against No. 11 Illinois

HOYAS HOOPS | Georgetown enters the fourth road game of its first five games of the season tonight, and so far, the team has been able to handle all the bumps it's come across.

But the Hoyas will face a roadblock in their nationally televised game against No. 11 Illinois. "They have a lot of different weapons," coach John Thompson III said.

Georgetown (3-1) is riding high after pulling off a road shocker Saturday at Oregon, ending the Ducks' streak of 35 home wins against non-conference opponents.

"We went out there and showed a toughness that is necessary to win on the road," Thompson said. "That's

John Thompson III has schedule hard road games to prepare for the Big East.

what we're trying to build and what we're trying to grow."

The growing will have to come fast against the undefeated Illini, who have won their first eight games by an average of 16.9 points. That's due in large part to the strong play of their two seniors, center James Augustine and guard Dee Brown, and upstart freshman guard Jamar Smith.

The Hoyas have a few weapons of their own, the most notable of which so far is center Roy Hibbert, who has dominated defenses and is averaging 16.3 points a game.

Whether Georgetown wins or loses against Illinois, the Hoyas say they'll still benefit from the tough competition ahead of their Big East schedule. "It's not by chance — it's not by accident that we're going into some pretty hostile environments," Thompson said. "Hopefully, we can get through these experiences and prepare us for our league play."

Strong play from Jared Jeffries, left, and Jarvis Hayes led to a win on Tuesday night.

Wizards' Balancing Act

Supporting cast needs to step up for 8-8 team

WIZARDS | Gilbert Arenas and Antawn Jamison are looking like returning All-Stars again, but the Washington Wizards are learning they have to rely on others if they actually want to win games.

That was evident in the Wizards' squeaker of a 119-111 overtime win Tuesday against the 3-16 Toronto

Raptors. While Arenas and Jamison did their thing — scoring 63 points combined — it was the play of small forward Jared Jeffries and shooting guard Jarvis Hayes that gave the Wizards (8-8) something the Raptors weren't prepared for.

That extra element hasn't always been there all season for coach

Eddie Jordan's team.

"The [system] that Eddie has — especially offensively — it can get complicated at times. So it takes time to learn that," said shooting guard Antonio Daniels, who was benched for Hayes last month. "You have to learn where guys are supposed to be, what cuts you're supposed to make, what cuts you're not supposed to make."

On the road against the tough Indiana Pacers (10-7) tonight, the Wizards will need to again see an inspired performance from Arenas and Jamison's supporting cast. That reliable third-man role — left vacant by Larry Hughes' departure — is still up for grabs, and plenty of Wizards are trying to claim it.

"It's hard to see where we are as a team. Everybody's going to be playing that much harder because everybody wants those minutes," Arenas said. "It's going to be interesting to see how that turns out, but everybody's going to be fighting. So it's going to make us that much better."

Guns and Eggnog

It's a mobbed-up, merry romp for the 'Three Wise Guys'

HOLIDAY HIJINKS | Beware of holiday TV movies based solely on a “clever” title. “Three Wise Guys” (9 p.m., USA) offers a “crazy” retelling of the Christmas story from the points of view of three Mafia hitmen, who happen upon a very pregnant and very shady lady who needs help because “there is no room at the Desert Inn.”

Tom Arnold plays a mobbed-up and brainless casino owner who dispatches a trio of hitmen to silence a couple of inconvenient snitches. The trigger-happy troika consists of the silent and surly George (Judd Nelson), the suave and vain Joey (Eddie McClintock) and Vincent (Nick Turturro), the assassin with a heart of gold, a doting Dad who pines to be with his wife and five kids on the magical night of eggnog and caroling.

If you think Vincent's character sounds completely contradictory, you've happened upon the central problem of “Three Wise Guys.” It's impossible to watch this “comedy” with your brain fully in gear. The film never makes up its mind. One minute the characters speak casually of murder, strippers and easy sex, and the next minute we're awash in holiday sentiment. Pandas

One of Tai Shan's keepers fields a few hardball questions

Most coverage of Washington's panda cub so far has consisted of little more than awwww-inducing photos and debate over the name "Butterstick." Pretty soft, by journalistic standards. As Tai Shan goes on public display today for the first time, Express' Chris Mincher grilled Nicole Meese, a panda keeper at the National Zoo, to get Tai Shan's E! True Hollywood Story.

Aren't there other types of pandas? How is it that the giant pandas are the ones in the spotlight?

We have red pandas at the zoo as well. The giant pandas — just their facial structure, with the big eye patches and the soft rounded bodies — just look like a teddy bear, and that's what people identify with. Red pandas look like a cross between a cat and a raccoon.

Oh, well then, I guess I can understand why no one would care.

A few of us just got back from the reserve in China where Tian Tian and Mei Xiang were born, and there, across the street from the giant panda conservation area, is a red panda conservation area. People do care about them, they're just not as widely known.

Is the panda cub going to celebrate Christmas this year?

For our benefit, those of us that work the holidays — some of us work on Christmas to take care of the animal areas — we usually give them a little something special.

A stocking filled with bamboo?

Not necessarily a stocking. Maybe an extra fruitsicle ... I don't think they really know it's Christmas.

If the panda had any idea what Christmas was, what would a panda want as a gift?

Bamboo. No, probably sugarcane. That's one of their favorite special treats. They get that occasionally. It doesn't have a lot of specific nutrition in it, but it is something they enjoy, kind of like a candy bar or a candy cane in your stocking.

Does bamboo have all the nutrients pandas need? Bamboo doesn't

"I would not mind being a panda myself. It's pretty easy, especially for a captive panda. All your needs are met, and you're catered to all day. It's a pretty good deal if you can get it."

BUNDLE OF JOY: How much would you pay to be in Nicole Meese's place right now?

at the panda.

I don't mean viciously slinging it at them, I mean, like, a playful toss.

We don't really interact with the pandas that way. They like to roll down the hill. [Their bellies are] kind of like built-in toboggans.

What do you do?

I'm one of six panda keepers. We get in at 6 a.m. and lay out breakfast — a bamboo breakfast — for the adult pandas. Then we put them outside in the yard and get to cleaning the inside, disinfecting the exhibit and preparing diets.

Does the zoo have anything people are even less likely to see in their lifetimes than a panda?

The Sumatran tigers are more rare than the giant pandas.

So people are bypassing animals that are more rare to see pandas.

I think people come with very specific animals that they come to see, but to really get an appreciation for all the animals, they really need to see all the exhibits.

Does Tai Shan deserve the hype?

I think so. I have been just

Den Mother

really seem that healthy.

Bamboo isn't that nutritious. There's also the double-whammy of pandas having the stomachs of carnivores, so they don't absorb a lot of nutrients from bamboo either. So that's why pandas aren't really the most active of animals. They eat a lot and they sleep a lot.

I have a fairly sizable bamboo patch outside my apartment. Could a panda live in it?

Probably not. We're actually making a pretty big dent in our bamboo supply.

To come up with names for the cub, I'm guessing somewhere in China a bunch of people sat down and brainstormed some names?

Right. And some of the names are reused. When we were in China, we met a male panda named Ling Ling, and, of course, we had a Ling Ling here that was a female. Each syllable can be pronounced four different ways in four different accents, and that changes the meaning. So just because you see the male name

"Ling Ling" that doesn't mean the name means the same thing as our "Ling Ling."

So it's not like a pope. They don't name it Panda Ling Ling II.

No.

Are the pandas glad it snowed?

This is really typical of the weather where they're from in the wild.

If you were to hurl a snowball at the panda, would it play along?

We don't really throw things enamored with pandas since I was a little girl, growing up here and coming here every summer to see the pandas. Getting to know Mei Xiang and Tian Tian personally, and having the privilege to work with them every day, I definitely think that they are worth it.

This isn't a panda slander piece. I was just curious what the hubbub was all about.

Tai Shan is just the cutest thing ever. So he definitely deserves all the attention he gets.

Can hairspray really be chic? CIBU PHO FINISH gets as close as possible with its Louis Vuitton-inspired bottle. The "finishing spray" doesn't provide all that much hold, but admirably performed a number of other hair-related feats. When sprayed on damp, naturally curly hair, it worked to create a wavy texture without weight or stickiness. It also helped calm winter-dry frizzies. This tester, who has a tendency to use too heavy a hand, appreciated the light mist the bottle spits out—it offered a bit more control than a straight spray. KRISTEN PAGE-KIRBY (EXPRESS)

Manolo says, Ayyyyyy! The winter it is here! And you cannot ignore it as you do the other problems in your life, by imagining yourself to be elsewhere. Trust the Manolo, it is impossible to pretend you are in the Montego Bay when the freezing rain is pelting your sad, forlorn hide. You must bundle up! Yet, you will still wish to be stylish, even as you take on the bulky outline of the Monsieur Bibendum, a.k.a. the Michelin Man. This it is why the Manolo recommends to you the Crosscreek boots from the Born (in black and brown, $179, zappos.com). So that at least the feets that stick out of the bottom of the massy ball of bad-weather clothing that you have become, they will be well shod and attractive in their warmth. Movies

Behind 'Syriana'

ROBERT BAER, author and ex-CIA case officer, was online Wednesday to discuss political thriller "Syriana," based upon his book | washingtonpost.com/liveonline

How were you approached by Hollywood to make this movie and how involved in the creative process were you?

I was approached by George Clooney who had read about my book in The New Yorker. My major contribution was traveling with director/screenwriter Stephen Gaghan for two months in Europe and the Middle East. The purpose of that trip was for him to hear people on the ground tell my story and their stories themselves. And then he went back to California and wrote the script by himself.

How closely is "Syriana" based on your novel "See No Evil"?

"Syriana" is taken partly from "See No Evil," in that George Clooney plays a burnt-out and disillusioned CIA case officer trying to do the right thing. And he also portrays somebody who has spent his life trying to comprehend the Middle East and then is ultimately bewildered by Washington politics.

Most reputable studies show that people respond to torture by talking — giving the interviewer whatever he/she wants to know, whether it's really true or not. Given that shaky foundation for information extracted by using extreme methods, why persist in their use?

I think that torture is a mistake for two reasons: One, during my career in the CIA, I watched foreign governments torture people for information and it always proved to be inaccurate. Under torture, people will say anything. Two, I'm personally opposed to torture because, by ripping up the Geneva Conventions, the American people will ultimately pay the price when they become the victims of torture.

Do you agree with the argument of some that the war against Islamic fundamentalism began almost 200 years ago and that it will go on long after you and I have died?

I just spent two months in the Middle East with Hamas and other terrorist groups and I found that this is not a war over values, this is a war over politics. Either they or we are going to have to change our politics or find a common ground. But until that happens, this appears to be a war without end.

What does "Syriana" actually mean? Is it a place, real or fictional?

It's a fictional place, a term used inside the Beltway, to describe redrawing the borders in the Middle East to suit our interests. It's a made-up name. For example, Iraq is very much an artificial country and that is one reason we're having so many problems there. The Iraqis are not a people with a common identity. Iraq was made up by the British from three Ottoman provinces after WWI, but history tells us the British were unable to unify the Iraqis.

Leave the PC Out of Xmas

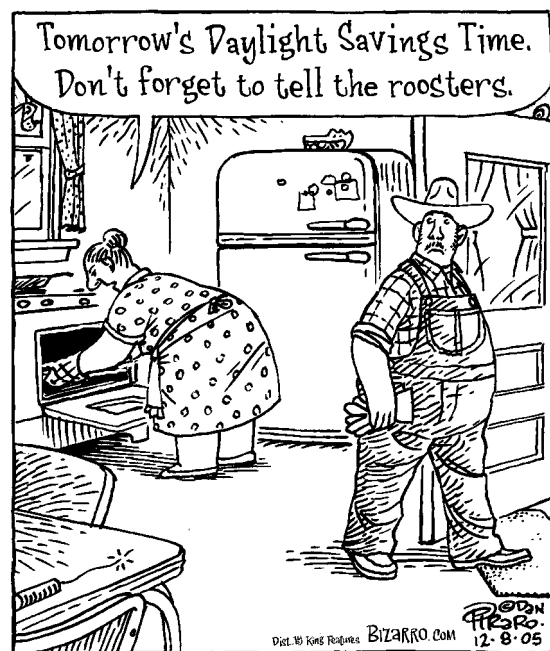

WHO ARE THESE PEOPLE who are complaining about the Bush family Christmas card? Christmas is a time of celebration of Christ's birth, a time of joy and happiness. It is not filled with mumbo jumbo about political correctness. My Christmas cards have reflected season's greetings or happy holidays, even merry Christmas; they are always sent to let the recipient know I am thinking of them. These people are missing the point.

Actor OMAR SHARIF pleaded not guilty Tuesday to charges that he assaulted a valet. Sharif, 73, was not required to be in court and his plea was entered through his lawyer. A pretrial hearing was set for Jan. 10. According to a civil lawsuit filed in October by the valet, Sharif was leaving a steakhouse in Beverly Hills, Calif.,

on June 11 when the actor became upset that his Porsche SUV was not waiting. Sharif was belligerent and called the valet a "stupid Mexican" when he refused to accept a 20 euro note, the lawsuit claimed. Juan Anderson, the Guatemalan immigrant who is suing, alleged Sharif then punched him. Anderson is seeking $50,000 in civil penalties, unspecified damages and attorney fees. (AP)

NAME: Robert Sabuda
GIG: Author, illustrator and paper engineer; co-creator of "Encyclopedia Prehistorica"

OVER THE PAST dozen years, the pop-up book has metamorphosed. It has gotten fatter, denser, more extravagant in the unbelievable intricacy of its inventions. This development is due in no small way to the efforts of New York artists and writers Robert Sabuda and Matthew Reinhart. Together and individually, the duo has helped redefine the medium, as pop-up artists have become "paper engineers." Saturday, Sabuda and Reinhart bring their latest joint creation, "Dinosaurs," the first of three volumes in their "Encyclopedia Prehistorica," to the National Museum of Natural History and to Politics & Prose.

How does the division of labor break down?

For something like "Dinosaurs," Matt created the manuscript first, wrote it, did all the research for it. I created the engineering, the three-dimensional work, the pop-up work, based on certain things he would tell me: It would move like this, it would move like that. And then when it came time for the finished color artwork, Matt created that. But, of course, it's not quite as cut-and-dried as I'm making it sound. It's much more loose, flowing.

How has pop-up publishing changed over the past decade?

For a long time — in the '70s, '80s and even into the '90s — pop-up books' greatest consideration was the cost. The golden rule was to make the book cost X amount of money. And since we don't work that way, I feel like we're much freer to explore a variety of subject matter, a variety of pop-ups, a variety of the illustrative work. We've just been given much more freedom to do it, and I think that that allows us to create better work. And the reading public is much more interested in better work than in price point.

How does your work fit into the historical tradition of pop-ups?

There was a time in the late 1800s when pop-up books were much more elaborate, and then they sort of waned out of interest, because new interesting things were happening in the world, like television and radio. But I think that today ... at least for many parents, there's a little bit of a backlash against that: OK, my kids have DVDs and video players and all this other electronic stuff, but I don't want them to forget about books or [how to] enjoy and love books. Our books are filling a need for that multimedia, interactive book form that's still fun and enjoyable and an artwork.

"The work that we create here is, as goofy as it sounds, for the child in us."

Do you design your books with children in mind?

The work that we create here is really, as goofy and New Age as it sounds, for the child in us. We're just interested in making cool, fun books that we like. GLENN DIXON

Depeche Mode has been around 25 years and isn't any cheerier

MUSIC | Not just anyone can rock a pair of leather shorts. Dick Cheney? God forbid. Dave Gahan? Born to wear fine Corinthian hotpants.

As Depeche Mode's frontman for the last quarter-century, Gahan is a master of melancholy. The sort of melancholy that makes young depressives of both sexes spend hours in the mirror perfecting the eyeliner and squeezing into leather shorts. With considerably less success in most cases, to judge from the legions of gothy fans who flood '80s dance nights. And who will pack the Patriot Center this Friday.

But that's what not makes Gahan and Co. professional melancholiacs — it's those anthems of sweet despair.

"Playing the Angel," their 12th album, walks the fine line between reinvention and retread. For the first time, Gahan contributes three songs to give primary songwriter Martin Gore a friendly kick in the pants. "Suffer Well" is the best of his contributions and among the strongest songs on the album. Lyrically, it extends Depeche Mode's messianic obsession. Gore's "Precious" harks back to one of the finest moments on "Violator," the lushly orchestrated "Enjoy the Silence." Plus some talk about angels and God, because this band is obsessed, remember.

Don't forget "John the Revelator," not the traditional blues stomp but Gore's pounding refutation of it, complete with actual guitars and gospel choir. It's a highlight, even if it does rhyme "Revelator" with "elevator." Factor in the leather shorts for that Sexy Lapsed Catholic effect and call it a career. BOB MASSEY

Dancehall Don

Sean Paul wants to rock your body and get back to his roots

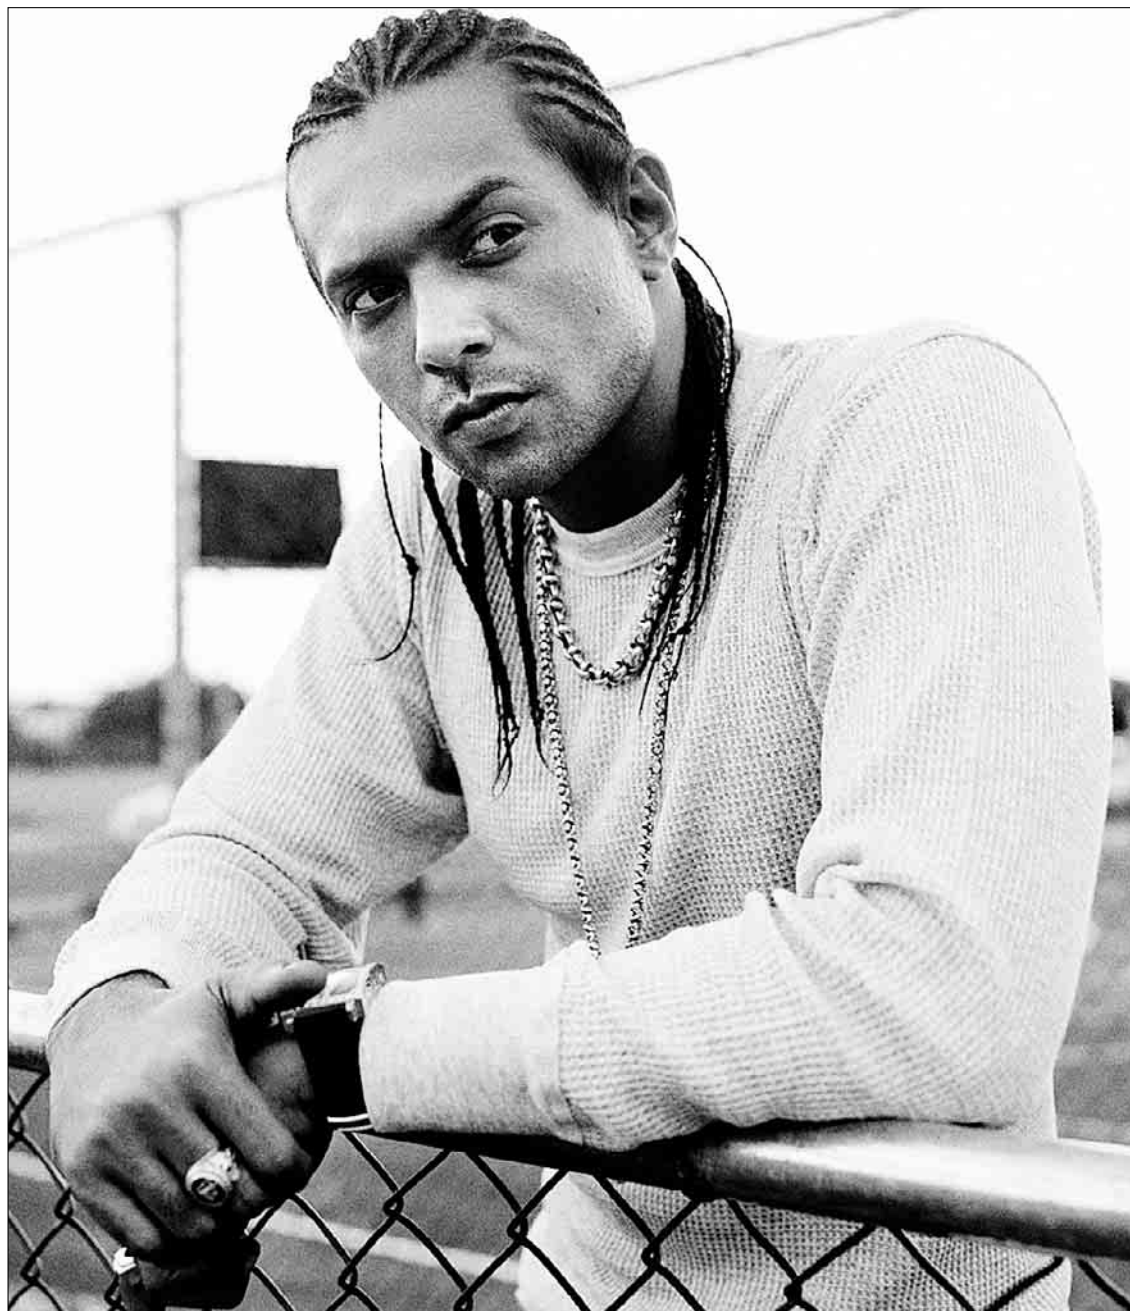

MUSIC | So Damian Marley's new-found U.S.-sized fame thanks to breakout single "Welcome to Jamrock" could be an indication that America's quest for reggae doesn't always end sweaty on a dance floor — Jr. Gong's late papa aside. Unfortunately, we wouldn't know. We've been busy dusting off our sexy-yet-comfortable heels impatiently awaiting Sean Paul's follow-up to 2002's Grammy-winning "Dutty Rock."

And finally after taking his sweet time, Sir Sean Paul Henriques — his born name minus the Sir — blesses dancehall fiends with 2005's much-craved "The Trinity." Suddenly the lighter waving and side-to-side swaying invoked by "Jamrock" ceased and Paul's dancehall riddims regained their place atop the pop charts.

"Trinity" may cost Paul some of the near-six-million-records-sold-American fan base "Dutty Rock" afforded him — with its slight pop-departure toward a more aggressive sound, exchanging big-name producers like Sly & Robbie and the Neptunes for lesser-knowns like Michael Jarrett and Craig Parks. And "We Be Burnin," the lead single off the album, has yet to reach the number-one-single heights of 2002's "Gimme the Light."

Then again, maybe down-tempo tunes like "Never Gonna Be the Same" — a tribute to a slain friend gunned down earlier this year — will bring back Paul's true-to-the-roots Kingston cronies lost in the mist of "Dutty Rock's" crossover success.

Lucky for those who simply want to "Make It Clap" less the intrusion of the artist's social conscience, Sean Paul only aims to please Sean Paul — as well as the club-hoppers and the ladies, of course. "It don't really matter to me," Paul told MTV.com of his fellow-Jamaican critics' scorn, "You know why? Pop means popular."

REGGAE ROYALTY: The self-proclaimed "ambassador of dancehall" brings his signature booty-shaking riddims to 9:30 Club.

Good news for the set that can only take their reggae through a pop filter — "The Trinity" is not a portent of a pop-less/raw-sounding/politically-charged/locks-in-place-of-cornrows Sean Paul.

Certainly Sean Paul is not the first dancehall sensation to give them a run on American soil; Yellowman, Shabba Ranks, Buju Banton, Supercat, Shaggy and Bennie Man are just a few of his predecessors that enjoyed a taste of crossover success.

But if Paul hopes to remain pop-culture's favorite patois-spitter, he's got to stick to the formula: Dancehall riddims plus hip-hop production equals heavy rotation, at least on America's radio waves.

Sure it seems the perfect recipe for an album chockfull of unoriginal beat-clashes, but the success of "Dutty Rock" proves this false, as do the standard synth sounds, uncomplicated beats and the lack of media attention for this year's "Trinity."

Still strap/lace/zip up those freshly-polished shoes. While songs from "The Trinity" may not have enough hooks to warrant excessive airplay, your hips will be none the wiser. DARON WILLIAMS (EXPRESS)

Hero in Curly Shoes

'Elf' is a rare modern holiday film — absurd and heartwarming

FILM | Hey kids, you wanna hear the tale of a cotton-headed ninnymuggins named Buddy? Yes, he's an elf. Well, actually he's a six-foot man raised by Santa's tiny elves at the North Pole.

Shot in the fleeting moments before Will Ferrell began to irredeemably suck, "Elf" (2003) is a convocation of comic geniuses masquerading as a holiday movie for kids. Bob Newhart's dry existential wit nails Papa Elf's mixed feelings for useless adopted son, Buddy. Ed Asner's crusty Santa Claus barely even protests the drought of childhood wonder that saps his sleigh of magical flying power. Amy Sedaris' hapless receptionist constantly barges in on her boss. As inept kid lit authors, Andy Richter and Kyle Gass (Jack Black's partner in Tenacious D) obsess over talking vegetables. And four-foot-seven Peter Dinklage administers a world-class beatdown on Will Ferrell.

THIS ONE IS JUST RIGHT: Will Ferrell plays Buddy the elf in "Elf," overgrown manboy with an irrepressible love of Christmas.

It's Ferrell's deranged glee that allows him to stand in this hallowed company. His elfen manboy bestows gratuitous hugs, sings badly improvised songs, and even tickles freaking Sonny Corleone, uh, James Caan, who plays his long-lost father. "You sit on a throne of lies," Ferrell hisses before he assaults an unconvincing department store Santa. And his looney fish-out-of-water reactions to New York almost convince the viewer that Zooey Deschanel could fall for this oaf.

There are even inside jokes for the grownups. Hepcat Leon Redbone voices an homage to Burl Ives' Sam the Snowman, from the animated "Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer." Then, when Ferrell first latches onto Deschanel's department store elf character, she asks "Did Crumpet put you up to this?" Crumpet being David Sedaris' elf name in his breakthrough short story, "The Santaland Diaries."

There's ostensibly a storyline. "Buddy takes it upon himself to win over his family, realize his destiny and, ultimately, save Christmas for New York and the world." Oh, and also to magically bag Deschanel, who's apparently turned on by men in yellow tights.

Dude, no one cares. No one even notices the ridiculous plot. The joy of this Christmas story is in a grown man begging James Caan to tuck him into bed. BOB MASSEY

Five Strings of American History

'Picturing the Banjo' tackles a tricky American music icon

OUT & ABOUT | Washington's status as a bluegrass center is well established, but its standing as a nexus of banjo activity could use a little publicity. Outside the five-string subculture, few people recognize that the D.C. area is home to one of the best banjo shops (Turtle Hill Banjo Company), old-time banjo players (Reed Martin) and banjo luthiers (Kevin Enoch) in the country.

So it's appropriate that "Picturing the Banjo," a fascinating show that traces the imagery of the instrument through several centuries of fine and popular art, should debut this weekend at the Corcoran.

True banjo fiends will find much to salivate over, from William Sidney Mount's renowned 1856

The Corcoran pictures the banjo through paintings, ad displays and other media.

portrait "The Banjo Player," presented as "perhaps the first non-caricatured image of an African banjoist to be produced in America," to a number of unique instruments dating back to the days when minstrelsy was the epitome of popular entertainment.

But you don't have to have callused fingertips to appreciate the lessons here. The banjo is a direct descendant of the gourd instruments brought from Africa by slaves. Consequently, the banjo became a prominent rhetorical device in the campaign of white racism.

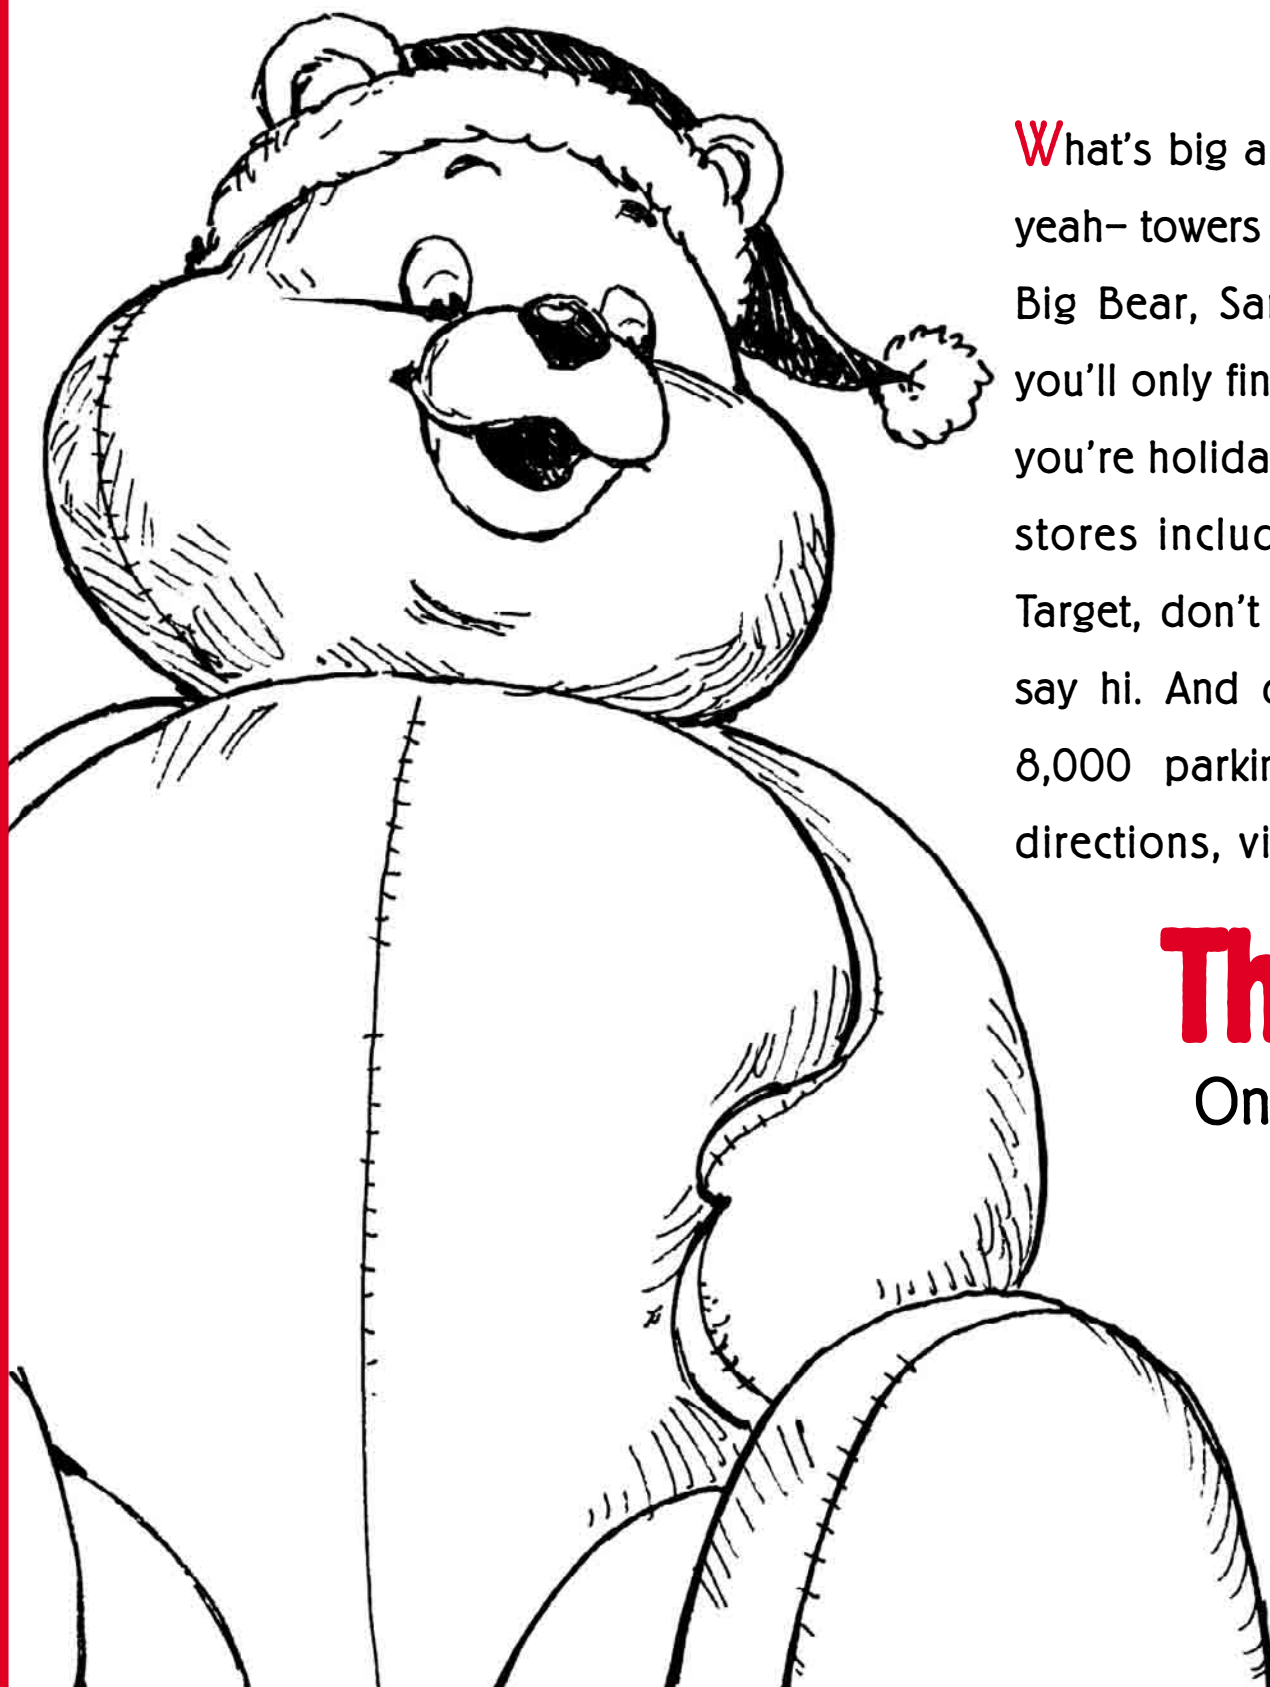

Currents of ridicule, appropriation and subversion are followed through paintings, sculptures, illustrations, Currier & Ives prints and sheet music covers. Today the banjo is often used to stereotype poor whites. One need only hum a few notes of "Dueling Banjos" to get a "Deliverance" joke going.

But that's a whole 'nother story.

A Very Jazzy Birthday Bash

Tenor sax-player James Moody turns a most musical 80

MUSIC | If VH-1 ever did a piece on James Moody, it would have likely pegged him as a "one-hit wonder." Why? Because to most pop-music fans, their only reference would probably be his 1952 version of "Moody's Mood for Love," which showcased Eddie Jefferson's hilarious vocal improvisation.

Moody originally recorded the song as "I'm in the Mood for Love" in 1949, highlighting his prowess on tenor saxophone. But it's the 1952 version, which has stuck with him throughout his more than half-century career. And if he was a pop star rather than a jazz legend, the song would be the type of annoying mega-hit that haunts musicians.

Fortunately, Moody's jazz legacy isn't so rigidly hinged on that one song. With significant dates with Miles Davis, Max Roach and Dizzy Gillespie, Moody is a bona fide bebop hero, whose deft technique on tenor saxophone and flute continues to inspire.

As a solo artist, he's recorded his share of landmark LPs, most notably "Hi-Fi Party" (1955) and Last Train From Overbrook (1958).

Even though he turned 80 this year in March, Moody's celebrating at birthday this Saturday at the Kennedy Center. Danny Glover will host the event, while other jazz greats such as saxophonist Jimmy Heath, trumpeter Roy Hargrove and trombonist Slide Hampton, among others, will join in the revelry.

Of course you'll hear "Moody's Mood for Love," but this event will surely reveal far more artistry from the guest of honor. JOHN MURPH

D.C. Caught on Tape

Eclectic post-punks the Cassettes think globally, rock locally

MUSIC | There's a reason they're called the Cassettes. The band headlining at Iota this Friday — along with Aquarium, Disconnect, the Caverns and Planar — isn't named after a more sophisticated piece of technology because its style is lo-fi, hands-on, global in outlook and treated as a trade, like cobbling or blacksmithing.

Many D.C. scene stalwarts have gone into the final making of the Cassettes, from Dead Meadow, to Weird War to singer Shelby Cinca's former bands, monumental post-punkers Frodus, which Cinca calls "kind of screamy" proto-emo, and the politically minded Decahedron with Fugazi's Joe Lally.

The Cassettes' willful eclecticism was honestly earned. The son of Romanian refugees and an internationalist in more than his musical tastes, Cinca amassed his funky little posse from far-flung places: Percussionist Saadat Awan rocks the table and drum kit, Stephen Guidry plays sizzling Cajun-style accordion and an analog synth, Cinca's former school-pal Tom Bernath is on bass, after a real-world education playing jazz on cruise ships and in Europe.

So throw anything at a Cassette — it'll only make him stronger. The band has busked in New York, headlined in D.C. "We've done quieter shows where we played a planetarium in Takoma Park," said Cinca. "We played at a tea place in New York, where we had to do two-hour sets."

Even if his former bands inspired mad loyalty among D.C.'s hardcore fan base, some molds had to be created and destroyed on the way to the founding of the Cassettes, Cinca said — that's part of the art process.

"Frodus was all about being super-futuristic; I think this band is the total opposite. Someone called us musical anthropologists. I think that's kinda nice."

Thankfully, at the Wizards Madden Tournament on Friday at MCI Center, one lucky gamer will safely engage Haywood within the electronic confines of a PlayStation 2. Instead of the hardwood, contestants will take to the virtual field of EA Sports' blockbuster video game Madden '06.

The single-elimination tournament requires advance registration and boasts plenty of goodies. While each participant or spectator receives a ticket to the Wizards-Bulls matchup that evening, only to the champ go the true spoils.

Among the winner's booty is a pair of tickets for the night's game, a PS2 autographed by Haywood and a head-to-head gaming joust with the Wizards center.

If these enticements don't provoke a registration (at washingtonwizards.com), one prize might seal the deal: The tourney victor will be awarded a custom-made Washington Wizards Madden championship belt. Still not enough to take the plunge? Friday is Antawn Jamison bobblehead night at MCI.

One Man's Trash

Down-and-out in Vietnam with some gritty new films

FILM | Over the past decade or so, U.S. moviegoers have been warming up to Vietnam. Anh Hung Tran has won an art-house following with languid, lushly lensed tone poems such as "The Scent of Green Papaya" and "The Vertical Ray of the Sun."

But there is another Vietnam, a gritty world of cyclo drivers, trash pickers and flower sellers hustling to survive. Sunday, the Freer's ongoing "Views of Vietnam" series presents "King of Rubbish Dumps," Do Minh Tuan's 2002 feature about a thuggish dump boss who rescues a street vendor from a burgeoning career as a prostitute only to let his jealousy get the better of him.

The film leans toward the maudlin and its writing, acting and production values aren't yet ready for prime time, but it has a couple of things going for it. Thing 1: Trong wheels around in a chromed-up Jeep that looks like a gift from "Pimp My Ride for 300,000 Dong" (about $19 U.S.).

LOVE AMONG THE RUINS: "Rubbish Dumps" doesn't have the polish of other imports, but the dirt gets under your fingernails.

Thing 2: The subtitles are hilarious. When the delicate Thuy explains her predicament (selling herself to buy medicine for her dying mother), we read, "I don't know what I should do. My mom is always sick. Dad's gambling and drunken all the time. I can't afford by selling banana flower." To protest Trong's strong-arming of the trash pickers, she offers a demure "I can not get used to extorting for money."

Granted, there are cultural differences at play, many of which will be explained by guest lecturer Kim Worthy, professor of film and media studies at Wagner College.

Still, Bui Thac Chuyen's accompanying 2000 short, "Night Cyclo Trip," is more readily taken on its own terms. To say that this dreamlike melding of ghost story and underworld mission quest winds up right where it started is to give nothing away at all. GLENN DIXON

Spiritual Harmonies

Positive Force rolls out the pop guns to help local seniors

BENEFIT | Without much fanfare the basement of American University's Kay Spiritual Life Center has become an established live-music venue. The sounds of two of the region's best pop-rock groups, Karmella's Game and Pash, will fill the room Saturday.

Karmella's Game is the master of infectious synth riffs and vocal harmonies. Keyboard maestro Katie Osinsky says that her group makes "energetic pop," true enough — it would take a cold heart indeed to turn aside from their promise of endless fun.

Guitarist Damian Nopulos has such a heart. He will soon leave the gleefully cheesy band to dedicate himself to Baltimore's punk-metal machine Devil's Radio. Nopulos reports that his replacement is moving from Arizona to play in the Game.

Fredericksburg's Pash plays a more prickly pop, vacillating among emotional alt-rock, sneer-free pop-punk and other styles, but an appreciation for pretty melodies underlies it all.

Positive Force, long the preferred charity of local punks, will use these acts, four others and a flea-market to raise funds for needy seniors. The gig is also a forum for P.F. to drum up interest in a large conference on social revolution they've planned for next year. TIM FOLLOS (EXPRESS)

Fulfilling A Fantasy

Tilda Swinton brings grandeur to her glacial role in 'Narnia'

THE DARK SIDE | "For evil to be truly evil, it also has to be beautiful," said Tilda Swinton, who plays the White Witch in Disney's "The Chronicles of Narnia: The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe."

The striking, patrician London native has given a great deal of thought to the nature of evil. But the key to the White Witch is her "coldness," Swinton continued.

"She is emotionally removed and unshakeable. She never raises her voice."

"Narnia," based on the first of C.S. Lewis' fantasy adventures, recounts what happens when four British siblings slip through a magical wardrobe into an enchanted world overflowing with mythological creatures and talking animals. Still, it is by no means an idyllic place.

In some ways paralleling the kids' home in bombed-out World War II London, Narnia is beset by evil in the person of the brutal TRAVELING IN STYLE: Swinton is appropriately regal as the White Witch of Narnia.

White Witch.

Throughout their adventures, the kids learn a host of life lessons, including the cost of betrayal and the values of reconciliation and forgiveness.

Swinton, 45, is identified with independent filmmakers like Sally Potter, Lynn Hershman-Leeson, Tim Roth, Robert Lepage and especially Derek Jarman.

Regardless of genre, the actress approaches every role with the same technique: "All characters are constructs, whether they are suburban mothers, archangels, witches or 18th-century noblemen," she said. "They all work within the confines of a story, and it's our job to figure out what role the character plays within that story."

Swinton hopes audiences enjoy watching the film as much as she enjoyed making it. "I'd like them to walk away from the picture reminded that when the chips are down, one can draw on one's own resources and that being alone is not the worst thing in the world."

"Yes, it's true; these kids have each other. But a family is made up of individuals — individuals with resources," she said. "The film also reminds audiences that forgiveness is the only option."

Why Don't You Look It Up?

→ IN ORDER TO FIND out more about author David Vise and his new book, we here at the Express Research Facility turned to www.google.com — and that's pretty much all you need to know about Vise's "The Google Story." The Washington Post reporter tracks the progress of the brain-child of crunchy billionaires Larry Page and Sergey Brin from useful computer tool for specialists to faintly dingy-sounding verb to profit-spewing life necessity somewhere between water and shelter. Vise will be at the 18th and L streets Borders on Friday discussing the killer application that virtually redeemed the Internet as a money-making, do-gooding proposition. If Brin and Page set out to make life a little better, as they claim, they ended up accomplishing so much more. Just ask any high-school student, potential date, journalist or bargain shopper.

FIGHT FOR YOUR RIGHT: The pageantry, the music, the culottes and the sans-culottes — Andrew Lloyd Weber's musical "Les Misérables" comes to the National Theatre in all its liberté, égalité, fraternité. Most of the songs aren't terribly memorable and may not be what Victor Hugo had in mind, but the spectacle itself is bound to move theater-goers.

Ancient Airs And Dances

→ SINCE 1980, the Columbian theater company Viento Teatro, has been gathering the ancient creation stories and sacred myths of their country's Amazon region directly from the people who live there. These tales are delivered with rich music, extraordinary costumes and ritual-like dances. "Pamuri Mahse," Lord of the Seed, is this weekend's featured theatrical narrative. A discussion with the group and two indigenous Columbians follows the performance. JACQUELINE FORSTER

Heading Straight To the Bodom

→ HIGHLY TECHNICAL FINNISH metal quintet Children of Bodom headline the 9:30 Club on Thursday. This is good news for those who missed the band opening for Lamb of God last winter. For those unfamiliar with Bodom's kids, they play campy progressive metal, complete with blistering guitar solos, synths reminiscent of video-game music, and angst-ridden lyrics. Cheesiness aside, Bodom are as mean and brutal as possible. What else would you expect from a band whose name references the mysterious 1960 murder of three children at Finland's Lake Bodom? Eating Around

NEW YEAR'S EVE

Restaurants Ready to Say Goodbye to 2005 in Style

As the end of 2005 draws near, restaurants across town are readying their New Year's Eve menus. And this Dec. 31 will be bittersweet for one of the city's top chefs. Ris Lacoste will be saying goodbye to 1789 to take some time off. Expect Lacoste fans to pack into the historic Georgetown restaurant for the evening, which will be highlighted by oyster and champagne stew with celery, walnuts and ham; medallions of venison with braised red cabbage; and monkfish osso bucco served with lobster, risotto and tomato-butter sauce. Seatings, priced at $75 per person excluding beverages, tax and gratuity, start at 5 p.m.

Just across Rock Creek from Georgetown at the One Washington Circle Hotel, CIRCLE BISTRO will serve a five-course lobster-themed meal for $65 per person, with a $30 wine pairing option. Expect a Yukon gold potato and Maine lobster gratin, cappelacci of lobster and leeks, butter-braised lobster with celeriac puree, beef tenderloin and black truffle sauce.

And at the MELTING POT, fondue will bookend a four-course meal for $70 per person that begins at 4 p.m. and lasts through midnight. The first course includes a choice of a fondue featuring Gruyere and Emmentaler cheeses in a champagne base or Raclette and Fontina cheeses in a marsala and white wine base with roasted garlic, caramelized onions and porcini mushrooms. Dessert is a chocolate fondue with flaming Bananas Foster, with chocolate dippers including strawberries, bananas, pineapple, cheesecake, nutty marshmallows, pound cake and brownies. While the fondue doesn't include a complimentary gym membership to work off the extra pounds in 2006, it does come with a champagne toast. MICHAEL GRASS (EXPRESS)

Belly Up to the Bar For Oya's 'Sushi Hour'

Saving money on raw fish sounds awfully tempting with OYA's new

The special menu includes the tuna tempura roll, which has the aforementioned tuna tempura, scallions and seven-pepper sauce, and the rock 'n' roll, with grilled freshwater eel, avocado and cucumber. BEER AND PIZZA

Paradiso to Build New Beer Tavern in Georgetown

One of the more annoying things about PIZZERIA PARADISO's popularity is waiting for a seat. But starting in February, patrons of its Georgetown location will be better able to explore the world of beer while waiting for a table. And beer lovers might just say, "Forget the Neopolitan-style pizza; let's imbibe!" BIRRERIA PARADISO will set up shop in the pizzeria's lower level dining room, which will be transformed to accommodate a 10-person bar and tavern-style table seating for about 30 more people.

There will be 16 beers on tap and about 80 bottles to choose from. In addition, Birreria manager Thor Cheston plans to have a beer engine which will allow for cask ales. Beer lovers can expect a distinctive array of beer offerings, including Cantillon Vigneronne, Brasserie La Choulette Ambree, Arrogant Bastard Ale, A. Le Coq Imperial Extra Double Stout and Unibroue Blanche de Chambly.

first twin Jenna Bush was spotted at the new Wisconsin Avenue hot spot and news spread in The Washington Post's Reliable Source and elsewhere, the establishment enjoyed an influx of business, some of it fueled by prepsters basking in the famous daughter's social aura. But as The Hill newspaper reported this week, the late-night fun at the preppy watering hole has run into an obstacle: a clause in its liquor license that is now forcing it to close up shop at 11:30 p.m. But with BOURBON, the GROG AND TANKARD and two strip clubs just up the street — all with last calls around 3 a.m. on the weekends — Town Hall thinks that its liquor license can be amended. TOP-SHELF TIP

Palette Offers $6 Martinis, Expanded Seasonal Drinks

Maybe in New York $8 would be a deal on a martini—wait, not really — so PALETTE's happy hour prices haven't been so enticing. But now they're raising the bar by lowering the bill. Every specialty martini on the menu, like the Jasper John (Stolichnaya Vodka, Poire William pear brandy and pineapple juice) and the MoMA Negroni (Beefeater Gin, Campari and Cointreau), is $6 from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Friday. That's half off. Plus, the offerings are expanding today to include two seasonal drinks suggested by the public: "The Kozlet Wake Up Call" (Grey Goose Vodka, Kahlua, Frangelico, Bailey's and coffee) and "Corinne's Spicy Crantini" (cranberry-infused vodka, sparkling apple cider, spiced simple syrup and vodka-soaked cranberries).

And for the non-hard liquor types, wines are $5 a glass, imported beers are $4 and drafts are $3.

FRIDAY, DEC 16th

The White Party

Of all our theme parties, the annual White Party is the most extravagant and popular. Taking place at the start of the winter holiday season, the white party has its roots in the circuit parties of sunny South Beach. Here in DC, whitewashed walls on Art Deco architecture don't really abound like they do in Miami, so the mood has shifted to a more "seasonally-appropriate" snow and winter wonderland theme.

Art & Scandal

➔ ACCUSATIONS WERE TRADED, great art was at stake and we're pretty sure that, at some point, hair was pulled. Thus the subject of "The Domenichino Affair: Novelty, Imitation, and Theft in 17th-Century Rome" holds enduring appeal. Dean of the Center for Advanced Study in the Visual Arts at the National Gallery of Art, Elizabeth Cropper details the affair. It seems that Giovanni Lanfranco accused his rival, Bolognese painter Domenichino, of stealing an idea for a painting from Lanfranco's teacher. Cropper discusses her book and the notion of the genuine in art.

WHAT DO YOU WANNA DO TONIGHT? BY FRITZ HAHN, RHOME ANDERSON AND DAVID MALITZ

THURSDAY

The 12th anniversary of CLUB HEAVEN's weekly '80s Dance Party gives us a chance to point out a lovely irony: The event has been running longer than the decade it celebrates! Arrive early for drink specials.

It's holiday season, so many venues and performers are getting into the spirit by putting together benefit shows. One area staple is Santa Jam at the STATE THEATRE. The concert always features many top vets of the local scene; Bluesman Linwood Taylor, members of bar band stalwarts the Nighthawks and 14-time Wammie winner Mary Ann Redmond are among the performers this year. The show is a benefit for homeless women and children and victims of domestic violence. An unwrapped children's gift gets you in, although extra donations will be accepted.

Eastern European ex-pats and adventurous music fans will want to check out the new East Euro Night at EYEBAR, a chance to hear Russian, Ukrainian, Bulgarian and other dance tunes while sipping vodka or a cold Russian beer. DJs George (Romania) and Vinny (Ukraine) spin "the hottest East Euro and house music" in the lounge's upstairs room, while DJ Pat sticks to the usual radio-friendly hip-hop and Top-40 on the main level. Get on the guest list at www.RedSkiesParty.com, then arrive between 9 and 10 p.m. for a free shooter and a drink for ladies. All-night drink specials include $6 martinis and $4 Belvedere drinks (it's Polish, after all).

FRIDAY

We'll admit that we don't really "get" free jazz. Something about the lack of a discernable melody or rhythm sort of throws us off. But the genre has devoted fans and they will no doubt be at TWINS JAZZ this weekend for its Free Jazz Festival. Saxophonist David Bond is the featured performer on both nights, and critics' fave Marshall Allen and members of the Sun Ra Arkestra will also be on hand.

SATURDAY

There are kids in D.C. who might not know that modern rock radio giant WHFS ever existed, let alone that it was one of the best stations in the country. The once-influential station went off the air at the beginning of this year, but it's still online, and its annual Nutcracker show lives on at RAMS HEAD LIVE with '80s radio staples the Psychedelic Furs and the Violent Femmes. The show is 18 and over.

Linwood Taylor, above, and the Nighthawks, below, join other locals at Santa Jam.

Nothing says holidays like four grinning, follically challenged guys.

Kegs For Kids is an annual party that benefits Toys For Tots. This year organizers are taking over the HAWK AND DOVE. A $20 donation at the door gets you all-you-can-drink Budweiser Select drafts until 11 p.m.

If you ask us, the perfect venue for a rockin' Man in Black cover band would be a local correctional facility, but we'd settle for a rowdy little roadhouse like JV's, too. Catch Cold Hard Cash from 5 to 8 p.m. tonight for free

SUNDAY

Why wait to celebrate Hanukkah? Professionals in the City is getting a jump on the holiday tonight with its annual bash at the BARKING DOG in Bethesda. Besides dancing and mingling, the party includes free appetizers and one free cocktail per person. Doll yourself up in "dressy casual" before heading out, though. Tickets are $10 in advance from prosinthecity.com, and guests are asked to bring an unopened toy for local children.

There's been an explosion out of London that melds jazz fusion, soul and electronic music. Sometimes it's called nu-jazz or broken beat, but the essential elements are ruthlessly danceable beats, jazzy arrangements and soulful vocals. London-by-way-of-New Zealand producer and keyboardist Mark de Clive-Lowe has become one of the cornerstones of this movement; he'll be doing a DJ set at 14th Street restaurant and lounge JIN tonight, accompanied by singer Bembe Segue.
